

Start Oil Well At Livingston

Special to The Billings Gazette.

LIVINGSTON, Aug. 24.—Ronald D. Johnston, well known in the northwest as an oil geologist, returned today from an examination of the Potter Basin oil structure, located north of this city, and states that the district is one of exceptional promise. The Mid-northern Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Mid-west, one of the most extensive operators in Wyoming, has recently entered into an agreement to do a large amount of development in the Potter Basin district.

Potter Basin Oil exploration begins 8/25/1920
