Bentonite plant at Lucerne to reopen

THERMOPOLIS (AP) — A company that hopes to introduce a new use for bentonite is planning to relocate near Thermopolis, officials said.

E.T. Ventures of South Carolina has incorporated in Wyoming and will team up with Wyo-Ben to reopen part of the closed bentonite plant at Lucerne to make a hazardous-waste cleanup product, according to Don Jackson, executive director of the Thermopolis Hot Springs Economic Development Co.

He said the company's product, made of 75 percent bentonite,
