

BILLINGS FREE FROM INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Billings doctors express little fear that the epidemic of infantile paralysis now prevalent in New York and other far eastern cities will reach this city.

So far as known, there are no cases of the dreaded disease in this city. It is regarded as improbable that Montana will be affected inasmuch as comparatively few children come to this state from New York. The medical profession, however, is prepared to take active steps to combat the disease should there be an outbreak in this state.
